memoration of the fourth anniversary of Nazi war criminal Rudolf Hess' death.

Marched

Hess, Adolf Hitler's right-hand man, was sentenced to life in prison after World War Il and died behind bars. He is buried near Bayreuth.

The neo-Nazis: marched through town, while about 2,500 antifascist demonstrators gathered outside the Bavarian city.

Police kept the hostile groups apart until they left town later at | night, when they ran into one another at gas ! stations and resting places along the highway.

Skinheads

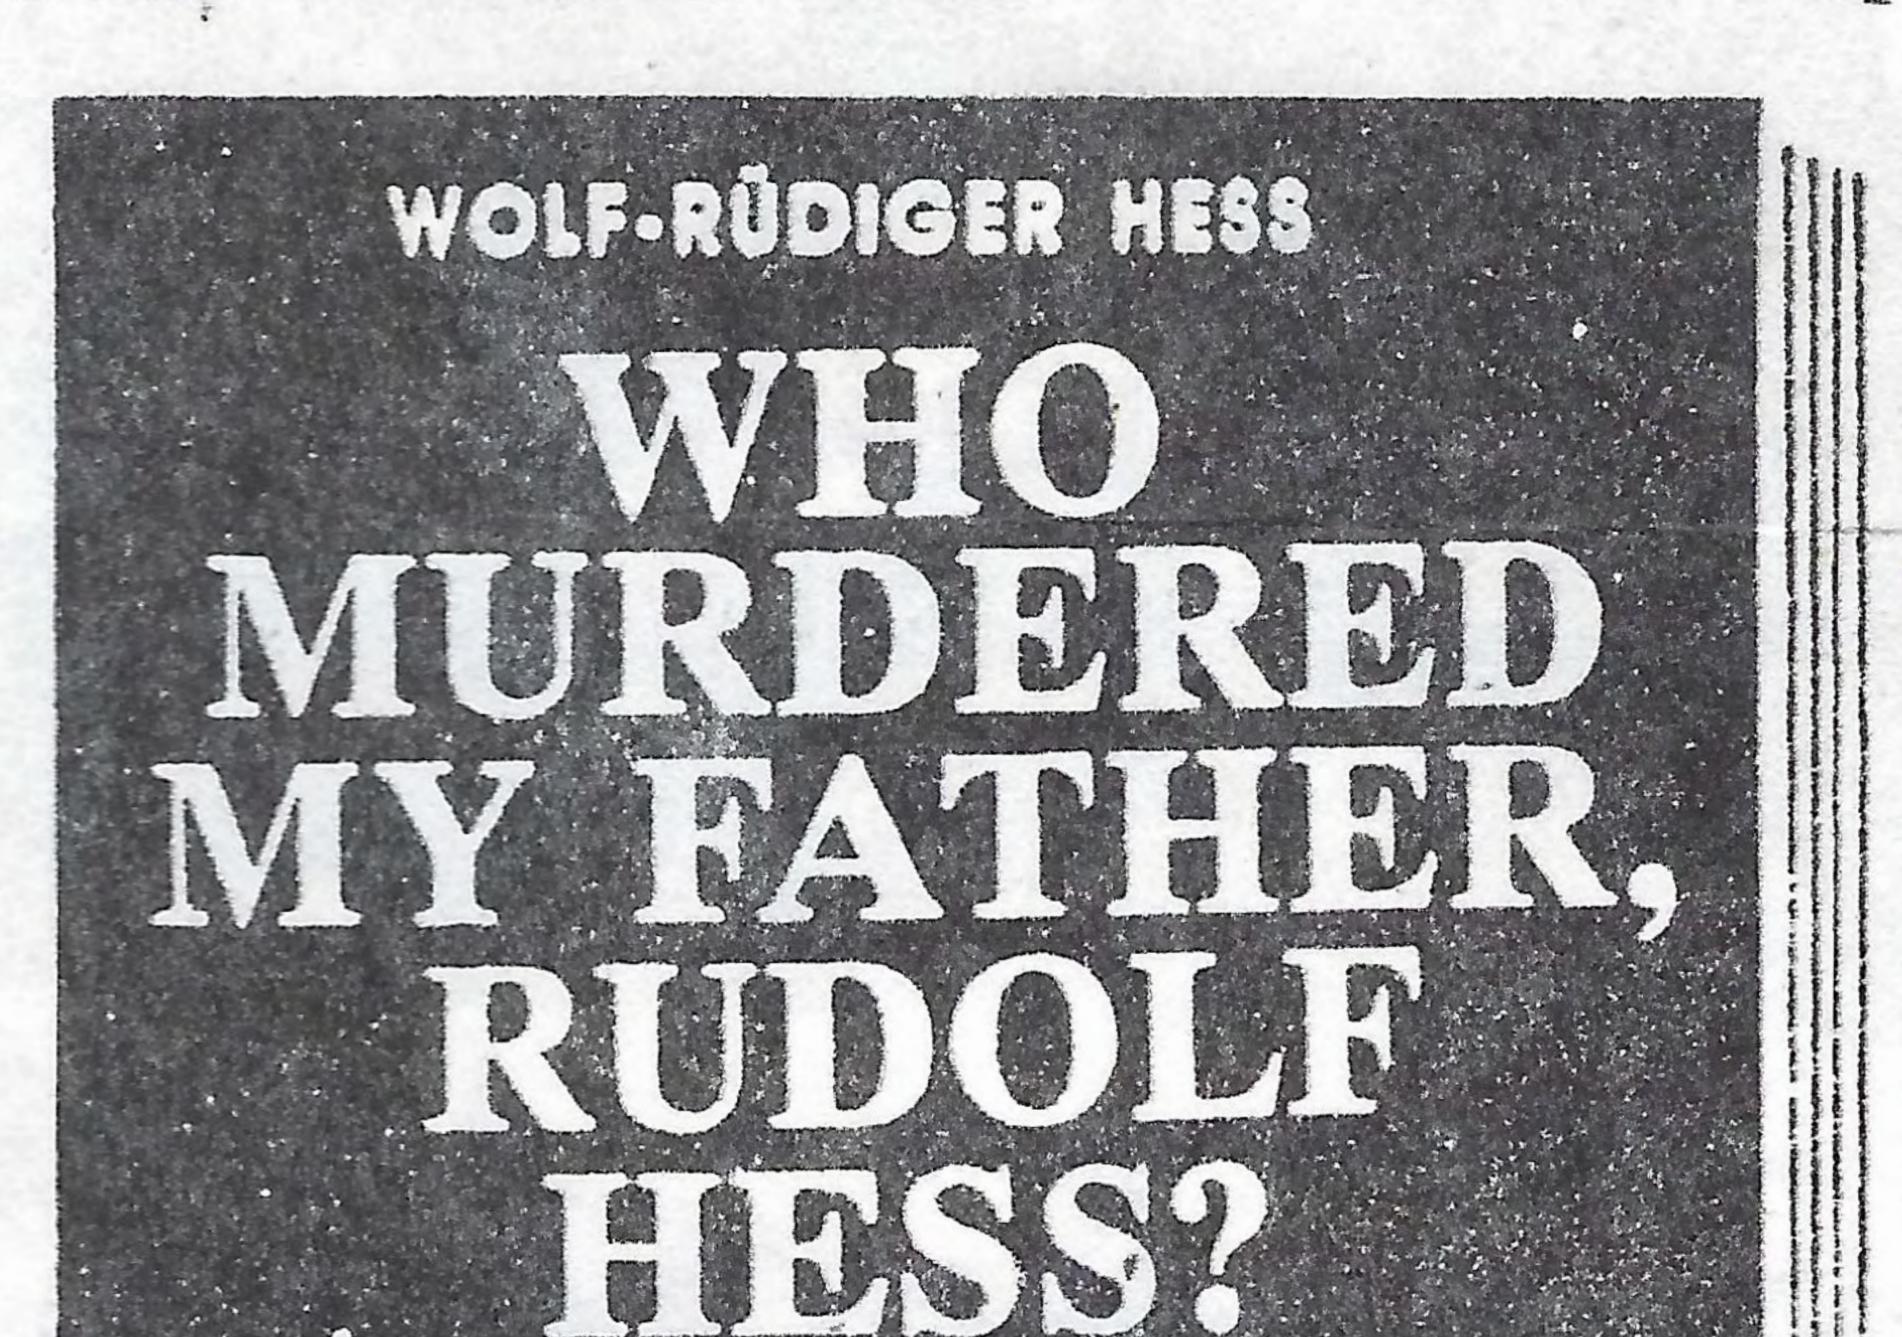

Police arrested three people in another eastern town who allegedly set fire to a home for political refugees, while they detained about 20 skinheads

Violent battles broke out at several different locations and one highway had to be closed off for 15 minutes because of skirmishing.

Police arrested 150 people and confiscated guns, knives, iron rods and an ax, he said.
