U.S. Once Again Follows Strategy of Half-Measures

The statements coming out of Ronald Reagan's Administration after the April 14th air raid against Libya sounded as if they had been written by Lyndon Johnson's advisors. They spoke of "graduated responses" and "raising the level of cost" for the enemy. And as in Vietnam gradual escalation allows the enemy time to reinforce and adjust his defenses, and as in Vietnam the level of cost does not matter to an enemy driven by ideology rather than materialism. Our politicians seem unable to understand the minds of those who believe in ideas and are willing to die for them; they seem unable to believe that the leaders of other countries are not as corrupt as they are. So they call them unreasonable or mad.

Both are frustrated and want to punish their foes regardless of consequences.

Israelis Torture American in Lebanon

The U.S. State Department has protested the torturing of an American citizen by an Israeli interrogator in southern Lebanon. Ghazi Dabaja of Dearborn, Michigan was visiting his family in south Lebanon when he was seized by the South Lebanon Army (SLA) on February 12th of this year. The SLA is a mercenary army paid by Israel to do its bidding in Lebanon, thus relieving the Israeli Defense Forces of much dirty work in its continued occupation of Lebanese territory.

The U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv contacted the Israeli Foreign Ministry 11 times during the five weeks Dabaja was held, but the Israelis would confirm only that he had been arrested and refused to give further information. On March 18th Dabaja was released by Israeli authorities to an American official in Israel, and on March 20th he filed an affidavit with the U.S. Embassy detailing what had happened to him.

In the affidavit Dabaja says he was picked up at his father's home by the SLA and taken to the al Khiam "detention" camp where hundreds of Shiite political prisoners

Reasonable leaders take our money and do what we quietly tell them to do. They do not have to fear CIA assassination plots, air raids on their homes or invasions of their countries. Though they usually live in fear of their own people, the risk of revolution is one that they are willing to take because with enough American money and support they can buy the soldiers, tanks and planes they need to keep the people in their place and beat down revolts.

It is the "unreasonable" leaders who will not take our money, and the "madmen" who challenge our government's foreign policy that cause us fits because our leaders simply do not know how to deal with such people. Even Ronald Reagan knows that an air raid on Libya will not stop Arab terrorism against the U.S. He launched the strike to make himself and the American people feel good; to make it seem as if we were actually doing something to punish our enemies. Ironically, this is exactly the same motivation that drives the Arab terrorist; he cannot defeat an Israel backed by the United States in order to free his people of the Jewish oppressor, and so he lashes out to punish his enemies, even though his act will be ineffective or even counter-productive. Reagan and Qaddafi are so frustrated and so determined to punish their enemies that the loss of innocent lives that inevitably results from their actions mean nothing to them. Punishment is everything, even though both no doubt recognize that it can only lead to a new cycle of indecisive violence.

Qaddafi is too weak to engage in anything but indecisive violence, but the leader of a great power can and should conduct a policy of decisive violence or should forgo violence altogether. We lost two pilots in the raid on Libya, and 240 Marines to a suicide bomber in Lebanon, and 57,000 soldiers in Vietnam, and they all had one thing in common - they died in vain. They died in operations that failed to achieve their political objectives, not because the country did not have the strength to achieve those goals, but because its leaders did not have the will to carry out their policies to their conclusions.

The rule is simple: if you are going to resort to a policy of violence then it must be decisive. American lives are too precious to be sacrificed for anything less. This is the foreign policy of a Nationalist. Ronald Reagan and the other plutocrats who do not fly the planes may think that two lives spent on a pointless operation are "acceptable losses", but we do not.

HYPOCRISY ON TERRORISM

How should the above rule be applied to our present situation in regard to Arab terrorism? In the first place we should recognize that our stand on terrorism is riddled with hypocrisy which is obvious to the rest of the world. For example, the Irish Republican Army (IRA) could not operate without supplies of money and arms from the U.S., and the British have said this and have begged us to close down Noraid and other IRA offices in this country. Yet we refuse to do so largely because Irish-American politicians (O'Neil, Kennedy, etc.) veto every effort made in this direction. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was very nearly blown out of her bathroom by an IRA bomb last year, yet if she launched an air raid against the Noraid headquarters in Boston I expect that we would get a bit upset about it.

In the past we have attempted and conducted (usually through the CIA) a myriad of assassinations of foreign political leaders (some enemies of the U.S., and some friends of the U.S. who had become embarrassments); this is state-sponsored terrorism. We conducted the Phoenix Program in Vietnam in which Vietnamese suspected of being Viet Cong political cadre (nearly 22,000) were seized and murdered on the spot often in front of their families. We now support the contras in Nicaragua who regularly carry out terrorist acts in which civilians are murdered.

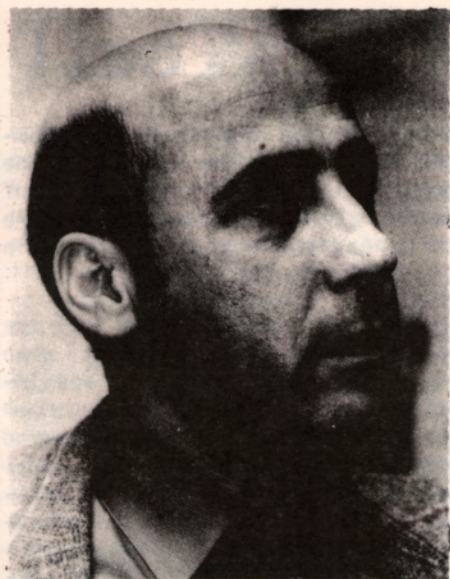

We fully support Israel and cooperate completely with the Israeli intelligence service (the Mossad) even though the Mossad regularly assassinates its Arab enemies in Europe and the U.S., and even though the Israeli military regularly tortures and kills Arab political prisoners. Amnesty International attacks Israel every year for such atrocities yet the media ignores the issue. Jewish terrorism in America, such as the murders of Alex Odeh (head of the Arab American Anti-Discrimination Committee) and Tscherim Soobzokov (alleged Nazi war criminal who was found not guilty by an American court), are given very little attention by the media even when the FBI says that they were carried out by the Jewish Defense League. Despite this proclamation the FBI has failed to make an arrest in either case.

Former terrorists such as Menachem Begin, Yitzhak Shamir, and Ariel Sharon are welcomed into this country as if international law does not apply to Jewish evil deeds. Why do we not arrest these people and deport them to Britain or an Arab country to be tried for crimes against humanity under the Nuremberg precedents? This is the sort of massive hypocrisy that America is known for around the world.

It is this hypocrisy that we must recognize and correct as a first step in our fight against terrorism. America will not be seen as a land of justice until we do. But if America is seen as a just nation then the Arab terrorists who want to attack us will get few recruits and little support from their own people. Unfortunately, this is a pipedream because the Jews who control our media and who have a lock on our politicians will not allow us to give up the hypocrisy which so benefits them.

USING DECISIVE VIOLENCE

Which brings us back to force. Until we give up our support of Jewish oppression in the Middle East we will be plagued by Arab terrorism, and that leaves us with only two real choices. Either we can ignore it and let police work attempt to root it out, or we can destroy the terrorists by conquering the countries that house, train and support them.

It is possible that the police forces of Europe and America along with a greatly strengthened Interpol could break the back of terrorism if they cooperated sufficiently. The success of the German police against the Baader-Meinhof Gang and the victories of the Italian police over the Red Brigades indicate what can be accomplished by police work. The Red Brigades are not completely broken but when the campaign against them began in earnest the Italian government estimated that there were about 100 Red Brigade fighters; now there are over 1200 members of the Red Brigades in jail in Italy.

Although Arab terrorism is statistically insignificant (the chance of dying in a car accident being infinitely greater), it is unlikely that the Jewish Lobby or the Jewish media will allow an American Administration to just ignore the problem and leave it to the police forces. But the only real alternative is a huge war in which we attack and conquer Libya, Syria, Iraq, Iran, and the Lebanon. And then we would have to fight against guerrilla fighters (supplied by the Soviets) in those countries for decades or perhaps centuries to bring a Pax Americana to the region.

The Romans had to fight against guerrilla armies in Spain for nearly two hundred years (197 B.C. to 19 B.C.) to pacify that part of the empire. It was such perseverance that struck terror into the hearts of Rome's enemies. Do Americans have that sort of strength? No, only a nationalistic people can be so strong. At present most Americans are individualists, dedicated to living long lives as pleasurably as possible. They do not identify with the nation and so are reluctant to sacrifice for it, except when it is in their individual interest to do so.

The U.S. is a great power but is not a great nation because its people are not united and nationalistic. Only a people of one race, one culture and one language can be united. Until we are such a nation America cannot hope to win long wars and so should not engage in them.

Thus, ignoring terrorism and relying on police work to combat it is our only real alternative, at least until the NDF takes power in America and transforms the country into a truly nationalistic society. But the Jews will not allow us to ignore the issue, so Reagan will continue on his half-baked plan of trading blows with Libya until Qaddafi's air force gets lucky and sinks one of our ships; and then Reagan will put his tale between his legs, declare victory and withdraw, just as he did after the bombing of our Marines in Lebanon.

are held. There he was tortured day after day for over a week. This "interrogation" was conducted by a man in the uniform of the Israeli Defense Forces named Yaaki. SLA soldiers did most of the actual dirty work of beating Dabaja, burning him with cigarettes, applying electrical shocks to his testicles, etc. When Dabaja asked about his 8 year old son he was told "he must have been the one we shot yesterday."

In Washington an Israeli Embassy spokesman, aptly named Yossi Gal, said that Dabaja was involved in a plot to kill SLA officers and that the Israelis acted to stop Dabaja's "mistreatment" once they found out about it. He did not explain why Dabaja was not tried for being involved in this murder plot.

After the Jews finished torturing Dabaja they put him in the hospital and then detained him for a further four weeks. Nevertheless, staff members of the U.S. Embassy in Israel were still able to see the handcuff marks and cigarette burns on Dabaja once he was released to their custody.

On March 19th the U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering confronted Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin at a party and in a weak-kneed gesture said that Washington expected an apology and a commitment "not to repeat the process". So far he has gotten neither. Somehow Pickering forgot that such torture is a "crime against humanity" under the Nuremberg Laws, or perhaps he thinks that Jews are exempt from prosecution for atrocities committed against Americans.

After all America did nothing when in June of 1967 the Israeli Air Force attacked the U.S. intelligence ship Liberty in international waters killing 37 of our sailors. After the bombing Israeli torpedo boats arrived and machine-gunned the survivors who were trying to get into their life rafts. That is a war crime folks, yet Lyndon Johnson and the American's military "leaders" kept their lips buttoned because they knew who is boss in Washington. So we can hardly expect an ambassador to Israel to do much more than beg for

Racial Tensions in the West:

On February 27, 1973, a group of over 200 armed supporters of the American Indian Movement (AIM) siezed control of the small town of Wounded Knee on the Ogala Sioux reservation in South Dakota. Led by AIM member Russell Means, the militant protestors demanded Senate investigations of injustices committed against them by the government. Further, they made clear their intention of forming a self-governing, independent territory in the region, denouncing control by Bureau of Indian Affairs "puppets". After making their radical declaration, a war zone formed about the town, surrounded by over 300 law officers and federal agents who had the support of armored personnel carriers and even reconnaissance flights of Phantom jets overhead. The Indians were ready to do battle in fortified positions and Means declared the government had two choices: attack or negotiate. After 70 days of siege, demands, and discussion, the remaining 120 occupiers surrendered on May 8 according to terms set by federal agents and AIM representatives. Many Indians and U.S. authorities alike were wounded during the confrontation with two AIM members being killed in fire fights. In addition, nearly 300 followers and supporters were arrested, many of whom were trying to aid the Indian rebels from the outside. The whole episode only helped arouse considerable sympathy for native Americans in the public eye.

While the AIM occupation at Wounded Knee seems forgotten, it represents a much greater undercurrent of racial tension in the West that goes unreported by the media. The Ogala Sioux reservation in South Dakota has long been an area of conflagration between Whites and Indians. At least 78 Indians were arrested in clashes with Whites only weeks before the Wounded Knee incident. AIM supporters engaged in a club-swinging, fire-bombing scuffle with police in Rapid City followed only three days later by brawls between Whites and Indians in local taverns. The violence had been fomented by the murders of an Indian and a White man which occurred only weeks apart.

AIM SEPERATISTS HAVE VALID CLAIMS

Indian seperatists have good reason to resent the System's authority. Unfortunately, while AIM and its supporters seek redress for maltreatment, many Westerners are innocently caught up in ever growing animosities due to governmental bungling and criminality over the past century.

Wounded Knee was the scene of an 1890 massacre of 300 Indians, including women and children, by a US cavalry unit. The Indians have not forgotten that nor the many broken treaties leading up to that time, which practically annihilated their home territory. According to the Lakota Nation Treaty of 1868, the Indians' reservation originally ranged from the Yellowstone to the Mississippi and North Platt Rivers, covering a substantial area of the northern West and Mid-West. However, in 1876, the U.S. stole the Black Hills, and after 100 years of court action reduced to a mere fragment their promised land in South Dakota.

There can be no turning back the clock on the great conflict when an expanding White nation and Indian tribes battled for living room on the same continent. The period of growth surged forth like a tidal wave in the early nineteenth century, representing one of the greatest periods of American nationalism when we not only battled the native Indians but the Mexicans as well. At the time Americans believed in their "Manifest Destiny" to conquer the continent. The aggressive spirit driving the White settlers onward could not be leashed. The result was a war of survival on both sides - undoubtedly one of the greatest racial conflicts in history.

Though we made mistakes and acted imorally at times, we won the great struggle against a proud and

Sioux Indian camp. This photograph was taken about 1891, shortly after the appalling "battle" of Wounded Knee of 29 December, 1890 in which United States troops killed two hundred Dakota Sioux, including women and children. (Library of Congress) brave people. We cannot and should not want to change our place in North America. However, once we made the land our own there was still room for the Indian to live independently, peacefully, and according to his own culture and customs. Unfortunately, the greedy and ignorant were determined to squeeze the Indian from his final hold. Capitalists, by the same creed with which they could import Black slave labor, readily helped break treaties in quest of gold or oil, further chopping up reservation land and driving the Indians away from their homes.

The American Indian Movement

With no ally in the Capitol to bar commercial exploitation the Indians have now been left to drift in our race-mixing society, as much victims of the plutocrats as ourselves. According to 20th century "enlightenment" the liberals and equalitarians encouraged their remedy of forcing our two peoples together only managing to further quash the last vestiges of Indian pride. Now the Indian must receive handouts like ghetto dwellers. This of course has done nothing to help their plight.

The AIM movement represents a new desire, however radical, amongst the native Americans to establish their own homeland upon our soil. They don't want pity or to exist in an alien culture, but only the ability to make an independent future for themselves.

The Indian Movement Today

After Russell Means' eventual release from his prison sentence for the Wounded Knee incident, Indian nationalism has been revived. Interestingly, the new AIM activities seem to have turned away from the originally leftist support they received in 1973. In November 1985 Means and other Indian activists announced they were recruiting American Indians to join Miskito freedom fighters in opposition to the Marxist Sandinista government in Nicaragua. The indigenous tribes of Miskito Indians along the eastern coast of the country have been in rebellion against the Marxists for more than 4 years, seeking self-determination. Means explained that sending American Indian combatants to fight the Sandinistas would "begin the process of uniting the red people of the Western Hemisphere". Although anti-Communist, Means has operated outside of current US governmental support to the Contras and refuses to recognize any leaders picked by the U.S. administration. Nonetheless, Means and other AIM spokesmen have taken a hard line with Ortega's regime declaring that the Sandinistas were subjecting the population to a "soulless Marxist experiment". Although the media won't say so, this latest activism represents the continued fight for Indian racial freedom.

Meanwhile, back in South Dakota, the scars of Wounded Knee are likely to remain until the situation is properly resolved. Violence and antipathy continue to grow amongst the Whites and Indians on reservation lands. Many Whites may view AIM as simply minority aggression directed solely at themselves. Unfortunately, if we do not help AIM and other minority nationalists fighting for racial freedom, then the situation will only continue to degenerate. In the future we hope to see the National Democratic Front's programs of racial separation implemented for the benefit of all our peoples. Justice for the Indians will not be forgotten in a National Democratic Order.

Atrocity

an apology. It is beyond the pale to expect the U.S. to ask that Israelis be deported to the U.S. for trial, as U.S. citizens accused of being Nazi war criminals are deported to Israel for trial (even though Israel did not even exist during World War II).

As far as we know our leader, Ronald Reagan, who is so concerned about protecting Americans from state-sponsored terrorism, does not plan to launch an air raid on the home of Yitzhak Rabin or the residence Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

One final note on propaganda - in its report on the above incident (which was about a month late) the Washington Post headlined their article "U.S. Protests Alleged Israeli Torture Case". Yet on the same page a headline referred to "Qaddafi's Terrorism", not alleged terrorism. This, despite the fact that the U.S. State Department has no more doubt about Dabaja's torture by Israel than they do about Qaddafi's terrorism. It is important to look for and recognize these word games because it is through them that the media seeks to and is often able to manipulate public opinion.

The Way Forward: High Tech Revolution

Technical progress is often blamed for the new and insidious ways the System continues to tighten its stranglehold upon White Americans. The creation of advanced methods of identification and more bureaucratic computerization will undoubtedly help the "authorities" clamp down on dissenters and political activists. As a result, the traditional means of social protest may no longer be open to us. While we cannot prevent the high tech fortress from being built around us, our enemies' new stronghold offers many weaknesses for us to exploit.

Technical advancement in itself is not an evil, but rather represents the new heights which American scientists are capable of attaining. Unfortunately, our ingenuity has been twisted by the plutocrats and state socialists to suit their own ends. Nevertheless, computers are a tool equally available to nationalists as well as our opponents. We would be foolish not to use modern technology to form the cutting edge of our battle for racial and national freedom. If not, then we will be weak in the face of dehumanizing efforts by the materialist tyranny which is ready to reduce its servile citizens to mere bar codes. Nationalists can yet turn many of the System's devices and techniques back on itself.

NDF MADE POSSIBLE BY THE COMPUTER

The personal computer, numbering millions in households throughout the country, has permitted us to become more independent and decentralized than ever before. As individuals we have tremendous access to information, services, and a new capacity for creativity and production. In the case of the National Democratic Front, we do not have to deal with the great burden of filing, typing, and printing that existed just 15-20 years ago. Our ability to put out newspapers and other materials is based on the use of this new and efficient technology. Indeed, without computers the production of NDF propaganda would be impossible as conventional production techniques are too expensive and time consuming.

On the other hand, the position of those in control grows increasingly precarious. There have been many recent cases of so-called "computer hackers" who illegally break into and override "foolproof" security measures of government and industrial computer systems. Hacking shows just how vulnerable the government and corporations really are. The new systems have created as many loopholes as they have barriers. As dependency upon the computer grows, we will likely see new forms of corruption and theft via high tech channels while society continues to deteriorate.

Another "revolutionary" piece of machinery only now being fully realized is the video cassette recorder. As people become more distrustful of the television industry and its mass media indoctrination, many will turn to the convenience of the videotape as an alternative. Already between 1980 and 1985 the major networks suffered a reported loss of 20% of their audience due to VCRs as well as to alternative programming on public and cable television. This in turn has forced ABC, NBC, and CBS to raise advertising rates which puts pressure on both the networks and their sponsors. With the VCR you can watch what you want when you want without the media's helpful "guidance".

REVOLUTIONARIES EXPLOIT TAPING

Obviously, some have been quick to utilize the valuable potential of both video and audio tapes for political purposes. Khomeini's revolution in Iran was based on the cassette tape, and this could have a profound effect here as well, particularly since many people have audio cassette players in their cars and at home.

In a recent Washington Post article it was explained how Polish dissidents are illegally circulating videotapes on anti-Communist themes amongst the public with VCRs. Their most radical and effective movie, "The Interrogation", depicts the Stalinist style police repression by the government. It had been quickly consigned to the censor's closet when first released, but was soon stolen and put out on video cassette by the Polish underground. The Post article stated that thousands of copies had been passed around for the past 10 months, "providing it a larger audience than many Polish films shown only in public theaters". While the Communist government apparently foresaw the political dangers of video technology, and attempted limiting the spread of recorders and tapes, the police admit they lost control over the medium.

Although open resistance to Jaruzelski's ruling clique is not possible, the opposition says they are prepared to capitalize on the government's failure to stem the explosive spread of VCRs and tapes in the country. As one opposition leader explained, "Video techniques will be the most important and most useful weapon in our hands this year, and within a few more years, we will work mostly in this area. The possibilities for free expression in video are nearly unlimited in Poland." And so they are here in America as well.

Nationalist and racist organizations in America and Europe are not ignoring the significance of VCRs and cassette players. A growing range of political, historical, and educational video tapes are now available in the Movement. Tom Metzger's White American Resistance not only sells cassettes with a positive message on racial problems but also has its own TV show on the local cable access channel in California. The Institute for Historical Review, which does in-depth research on the "Holocaust" myth and many other historical fallacies generated by the Soviets and the Western plutocracy, continues to widen its selection of authoritative video and audio tapes on these "forbidden" subjects.

Our comrades of the National Front in England are producing films of their speeches, rallies, and their popular "Rock Against Communism" concerts. Likewise, the NDF hopes to expand into this new area of communications, making our message available conveniently and privately to individuals and groups across the nation. Our enemies will surely commit their own arsenals in attempts to suppress us, however, technology offers the Nationalist Movement a new range of options to be exploited in our struggle against the Plutocracy.

Firstly, thank you very much for the literature you sent me concerning your organization.

As you are aware, we in England have a depressing problem with the "Alien" population. The "blacks" constantly riot, rape, mug and abuse our country yet all our "pathetic" government will do is sympathise with them and blame it all on unemployment, poor housing, racialism and lack of facilities for them. Since 1979, when Mrs. Thatcher's conservative party took control, over 400,000 immigrants have entered our "once" great country and took our jobs, lived off the state and have been a general nuisance to the law abiding whites. Over 80% of rapes in London are committed by "aliens", 85% of muggings in London are committed by blacks, 55% of burglaries in London are by blacks. A vast majority of people in the UK, particularly the old generation are afraid to walk the streets through the fear of black violence, until our country deports all of the immigrants back to their countries of origin, Britain will continue to slide downhill.

The National Front is the only party who can get the country off its back and onto its feet to make us the world force we once were. Although we have a real battle on our hands we will fight to keep Britain White forever, by deporting all immigrants we will create more jobs, less crime, and as a country be far better off financially.

We will in the end win and be trouble free.

Yours "Racially",
Alan Derrick

Dear Mr. Gallo:

Some months ago you sent me a couple issues of The Nationalist and requested my comments, and support. The last several months have been a time of great changes and upheavals, so I haven't taken time to respond until now.

In the first place, I am in whole-hearted agreement with your ideals and I admire your energy, initiative, and courage in undertaking to found such a publication and such a movement.

As it happens, I have left the country for an extended stay in Saudi Arabia. I will not be able to personally participate in any activities, but I would like to receive your publication and generally stay in contact.

Dear Gary:

I have received every issue of The Nationalist up to, and including, the March issue. I hope you've found the time to mail me the April issue as I always look forward to receiving each new issue and digest their contents with relish! Incidentally, I think your March issue was your best effort yet. In particular, the front page story, "Worker-Owned Weirton Steel Prospers", was really excellent. In fact, if I were at liberty to influence matters, I'd be all in favor of reprinting this article in "Nationalism Today".

I was extremely heartened by the progress you reported in your letter, and especially pleased to hear that you're attracting some good young blood. I hope the success continues-- though, of course, it will not be a bed of roses and I dare say your first set-backs are on the horizon. Nevertheless, I am sure you have the resilience to surmount any obstacles placed in your path and my heart goes out to you in your struggle to kick some life into the American Movement.

Your friend and comrade,

REMEMBER THE UNEMPLOYED!

It seems that every time there is an upturn in the economy Americans are very quickly able to forget the unemployed. Once the ordinary citizen ceases to fear that he himself might become unemployed, then all you hear is "its everyman for himself", "stand on your own two feet", "look out for number one", "survival of the fittest" and all the other trite sayings of the individualism.

But a nationalist can never forget the sufferings of his people because he identifies with his nation and sees his people as one being. A wound to one part of the body is a wound to the whole. The National Democratic Front will not and cannot forget that there have been at least 6 million White Americans unemployed in every year since 1975. This is a national tragedy!

A man must be given the opportunity to work, otherwise he will feel as if he is making no contribution to our civilization, and he will quickly lose his sense of dignity and self-worth. Does either the Republican wing or the Democratic wing of the Plutocratic Party care? No, they are content to put people on the dole in order to buy off discontent. They seem not to understand how much damage this does to the social fabric of the nation.

Only the National Democratic Front cares. Only the NDF will set up a National Employment Agency to support, train, and place or employ all those who are willing to work. This labor pool and the vast untouched land and mineral resources of America will be combined to develop new industries and new cities such that all of our work-force can be employed. No nationalistic people can tolerate condemning even a few of its people, let alone millions, to the cruelty of unemployment. We love our own too much for that, and we are determined to give everyone the power to contribute to the health of our nation according to his abilities.

Wiesenthal Hunts Spanish Nazis

Nazi-hunter Simon Wiesenthal announced that he has uncovered new evidence in Vienna that shows that King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella were members of the Nazi SA. Respected Jewish historians have long theorized that the King and Queen, who threw the Jews out of Spain in 1492, were really Nazis but until now there has been no solid evidence to back up the accusations. According to a New York Times report, Wiesenthal has found membership cards to a SA riding club issued to the Spanish royal couple. Renowned handwriting experts have verified the authenticity of the two cards.

Wiesenthal said he believes that Ferdinand and Isabella are alive and living in Paraguay. He said that reliable Jewish witnesses have filed depositions with him which say that they have seen the Spanish couple "strolling arm in arm" in the streets of Asuncion. Wiesenthal said that he will petition the government of Paraguay to deport the King and Queen, known by Spanish Jews as the Monarchs of Death, to Israel for trial on charges of crimes against humanity.
