Ross Perot: The Inside Out Man

Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, both former governors, ran against their presidential opponents as outsiders who could and would shake up the Washington Establishment. The strategy worked for both, and now the ultimate capitalist insider, Ross Perot is trying to capitalize upon the same approach, hiring former Carter and Reagan campaign managers (Hamilton Jordan and Ed Rollins) to ensure that all rolls smoothly.

The U.S. is a plutocracy in which the real string pullers are not the politicians but the rich who control their fate through campaign contributions and "independent expenditures" to either attack or support them. Perot has played this dirty insider game of buying influence most of his adult life. For example in 1969 Perot spent a million dollars on television ads supporting Richard Nixon's Vietnam policy. He was, of course, always welcome at the White House, with one exception, and his computer company EDS thrived on government contracts despite the fact that the federal bureaucracy charged him with gouging. The alleged overcharging by EDS was investigated by the Congress in 1971, but nothing ever came of the investigation even though Perot's 1968 Medicare/Medicaid contract was obtained illegally, that is without the required competitive bidding.

The exception referred to above in Nixon's close relationship with Perot occurred in 1974 as Nixon was about to resign under pressure of impeachment. Perot had lost $60 million on a Wall Street deal which he had mismanaged and he wanted the President's help to get out of it. Nixon was apparently in no mood to help anyone and refused to accept Perot's calls. Ah, the perils of plutocracy. Better to run it from both sides of the political game as did the DuPonts, Rockefellers and Kennedys. And now Perot intends do just that.

Perot claims to be a self-made man but in fact he comes from a wealthy family and it is unclear how he got the original 1965 Medicare/Medicaid government contract for processing applications in Texas which made EDS a giant success virtually overnight and which ultimately made Perot a billionaire. We would recommend the reading of Robert Caro's extraordinary biography of Lyndon Johnson, The Lyndon Johnson Years, which is a primer on modern plutocratic politics. The book explains how lucrative government contracts were let in Texas in that era, and it certainly was not by competitive bid.

Virtually everything having to do with either state government or federal government work was rigged politically. So how did Ross get the contract considering that his was a newly formed company without a track record in the management of large contracts?

Fast and Loose

Perot is a salesman and made his mark as such for five years at IBM before founding EDS. And like most salesmen he is fast and loose with the truth. For example, at four different times in his life he has given four distinctly different reasons on why he tried to get out of the Navy two years before his Naval Academy commitment to serve expired. He claimed to deliver newspapers as a child on horseback, but childhood friends said he did it on bicycle like everyone else. He claimed to be the first to open a newspaper route in the local Black ghetto, but again friends said that the route already existed and he just picked it up to add it to two others he already had. He has said that it was a "goofy ... myth" that he banned facial hair in his company, yet in 1983 a federal court found that EDS had fired an employee for wearing a beard. He denied involvement in the Alliance project which sought expansion of the Ft. Worth Airport onto land owned by him and his son, and this lie was exposed by Newsweek magazine. And the stories about his abuses of power and dishonesty go on and on - but only in the print media.

The real question is with such a doubtful background and reputation for the truth how is it that Ross Perot has gotten such an easy ride from the media, particularly television. The vast majority of Americans rely not on newspapers but upon the TV for their information and the charges against Perot have not been picked up and made an issue on the television and so they can do him little damage. The Democratic and Republican establishments have the connections with the press and the power to get their charges investigated and printed, but they do not have the power to force the television networks to play the accusations or the evidence. So Perot has gotten a free ride at a most crucial time, i.e. before he officially begins his campaign and commits his hundreds of millions to the election. Once he does so he can drown out even criticism from the nightly news anchors and talk show hosts.

All the Right Moves

But why has Perot gotten this extraordinary three month free ride? It must first be said that Perot is not politically naive, just the opposite. Perot has taken only two strong stands on the issues so far: 1) he is in favor of a multiracial society and civil rights (diversity is our strength and my daddy taught me to love and respect Black people as equals are typical statements for him), and 2) he is a strong supporter of Israel and Zionism, praising even the unprovoked attack on Iraq by Israel in 1982 to destroy nuclear production facilities, an attack which the world community condemned at the time - particularly as Israel possessed and possesses a huge atomic arsenal which is why the Arabs want and feel they need nuclear weapons.

So Perot supports both the Jewish domestic agenda for the U.S. and the Jewish foreign agenda for the U.S., otherwise he has said virtually nothing on policy. And the less said the more likely he will be elected. All he needs is the support of the Jews and their television networks combined with his money and a general disdain by the electorate for the known quantities - "insiders" Bush and Clinton - and the White House is his.

WASPs vs. Jews

The Jews are clearly determined to see Bush knocked off. They were pleased with his attack on their most powerful enemy, Iraq, but they were not happy that he did not finish off Saddam Hussein and they are quietly furious over his refusal to guarantee $10 billion in loans to resettle Russian-born Jews on the West Bank. But the Jews also recognize that the Democrats have no one who can beat Bush, particularly not scandal-ridden Clinton, whom even the press refers to as Slick Willie. Thus Perot, who can pose as an outsider and unite the disaffected from both parties (as he has no real ideas or ideology of his own beyond supporting capitalism), is a godsend for the Jews. After the election we will find that the normal Jewish giving to both the Democratic and Republican presidential candidates will be way down. Some money will be given to hedge bets but not the tens of millions normally contributed to the two presidential campaign committees by the Jews.

The Only Solution

Perot's election will be a positive step for our national revolution as he is capitalism's last gasp in this country. A fundamental maxim of capitalism is that those who make the most money are the smartest and so are the best qualified to make up the ruling class and shape the laws of the country. In this sense Perot is the ultimate representative of capitalism's best and brightest. If Ross

Perot fails just as did his Democratic and Republican predecessors, and he will, then more and more people will come to understand that it is the system of capitalism that is at fault and that revolution against the plutocracy is the only solution. GG

Media Instigated the L.A. Race Riot

On April 30th the Los Angeles Black community broke out into a race riot following the acquittal of four White policemen in the beating case of "Black motorist" Rodney King. Whites throughout the country watched horrified as Blacks attacked, beat and murdered Whites in the predominantly Black neighborhoods of L.A. while the police stood by as if paralyzed - all this being broadcast live on television.

The Same Old Tune

Afterwards, as if in a flashback to the 1960's, we heard the same old tired explanations and excuses for Black violence - blaming all on White racism and discrimination. And then the inevitable demand for more billions of dollars to be sunk into the great Black sinkholes of the inner cities, as if the hundreds of billions spent in the last thirty years on Black welfare and forced integration accomplished anything.

All was the same as in the riot torn '60s except for the White response. Whites in the 1990's no longer feel guilty, they no longer feel sympathetic to claims of discrimination, and they are no longer willing to subsidize Black incompetence. Thus George Bush's tortured response to the riots. He was under pressure from the still very powerful civil rights establishment and the media to announce the commitment of more money to the inner cities, yet he knew such a move would be vastly unpopular with the White electorate that votes Republican presidents into office. So he mealy-mouthed a commitment of a few millions, and left it at that.

Media Manipulation

What is by far the most interesting aspect of these latest race riots (the rioting having spread from L.A. to San Francisco to Atlanta) is the fact that they were inspired by the nature of the media's intentionally distorted coverage of the Rodney King affair. Yet, we would never have known this had not the police officers been acquitted; only then did information begin to come out which contradicted the official media version of the event.

Specifically, a bystander videotaped the brutal beating of Rodney King by four L.A. policeman while many other cops stood around and watched. All America saw this videotape over and over again, yet it turns out that every television network chose to broadcast only that portion of the videotape that showed the beating and chose to refrain from showing the equally interesting action that preceded the beating even though all was on the tape. Why? Because the preceding action would justify the beating in the minds of many Americans and this was not the propaganda result desired by our media moguls.

The Reality

We can now piece together what actually happened. Rodney King was driving with two Black friends on the streets of L.A. when the police attempted to stop him, apparently for speeding. King chose to make a run for it but was finally chased down. His two Black friends gave themselves up peacefully and were quietly arrested, but King lunged out of the car to attack Officer Powell and this was captured on the home video. Other officers fired two tasers into King (50,000 volts) yet he continued his assault causing them to think that he must be on PCP (though he wasn't) as he was acting like a wild animal.

The White cops finally knocked and wrestled King to the ground but he would not stay down. As he continually tried to rise they beat him with their nightsticks - excessively toward the end (particularly by Powell) when one of the cops could surely have put a knee in his back

First I have to thank you for your letter and enclosed newsletters. Indeed I was astonished to get magazines with such historical and well-founded articles from the U.S., Normally papers from the U.S. argue problems on a very materialistic level so I was very pleased to read lines full of idealistic and racial knowledge. Political struggle can only be won if body, heart and mind are working together to reach one goal, or as the Romans said, "Ut sit mens sana in corpore sano."

Here in Europe we are attempting to unite groups of different approaches to fight together, to accept each other and mainly to help each other. This is one of the reasons we are considered a real danger for the postwar systems. And this is the real reason that our comrades are being sent to jail. It is political oppression only, and the official arguments are just excuses.

So I'm looking forward to a binding together of White Nationalist groups worldwide because the "working-against" that led to two big wars in this century should not occur again. Only White nations were the mourners!

So the best greetings from Vienna to all our friends and comrades in Tennessee. To you I stay unbroken and sincerely,

Gottfried Kuessel

I am a subscriber to The Nationalist. Enclosed is a check for $100 to cover the cost of a sample copy of New America and the remainder as a contribution. Years ago I was involved in a New York City group called the U.S. Nationalist Party. There was a competing organization the National Renaissance Party which was headed by the late James Madole. Madole had been involved with Yockey [author of Imperium] and operated from that perspective. At the time some of this seemed too radical to me, but in thinking back I feel he was correct. Your program reminds me of his.

It seems to me that the White man's real enemy is himself, that is, the biologically White international capitalists who occupy the fulcrum of world power and whose aims, at this time, coincide with that of the Jews, though not always with Zionism.

Best wishes,
 Ed Novak, New York

I have enclosed an interesting editorial from the Tulsa World on David Duke. I believe that it states several of the reasons for Duke's support from the people of Louisiana. It is encouraging to learn that he has so much support from the young Whites who have been victimized by the forced integration of the last thirty years or so. Apparently a lot of them escaped the liberal's brainwashing efforts. However, I think it is premature for any of the White nationalist leaders to take public office. The nation is on an irreversible course toward total collapse, economically and socially. Let the people responsible for it take the full blame. If any of our people are in office they will only be discredited along with those actually responsible.

The establishment politicians have now shown themselves to be so totally corrupt, incompetent and self-serving that even the most blind and ignorant of the masses are becoming disgusted with the system. We should be on the sidelines planting the seeds of reformation and organizing for the rebirth of our nation, after the calamity, as a great European civilization. We are unfortunately powerless to change the course of events until the worst has occurred... though we must keep nipping at their heels and harassing at every opportunity while getting as much publicity as possible as critics of the establishment.

I continue to try to spread the tenets of Democratic Nationalism, and I anticipate having a much more interested and receptive audience in the near future.

Your comrade,
 Bim McKinney, Kansas

Your article on the National Socialist Revolution was masterly. I wish to heck the American "Six-pack Joe" knew one-tenth of what was in there. It was indeed a "half revolution." Dr. Goebbels on the occasion of the takeover of Czechoslovakia made an asinine remark to the effect that the Czechs should forget their "stupid nationalism." On another occasion he said that Prague was a German city! The Nazis were right on many things but also had their share of idiocy....

Keep up the good work!

and forced his hands to his rear to be handcuffed.

Highly Selective News

The media chose not to play that portion of the video showing the other two Blacks being peacefully arrested, chose not to show King's attack upon Powell, and chose not show the tasers and their lack of stunning effect upon a wildly enraged King. Instead, they chose to show only that half of the video which made their case that this was a racial attack of White cops against a poor Black victim, another egregious example of White racism and the oppression of Blacks - another propaganda feather in the cap of a flagging civil rights movement.

And in its arrogance, the men of the media must have actually believed that the other side of the story would never come out because the media-inspired hysteria would most certainly lead to a quick conviction, and the truth would then recede into the mists. That is exactly what would have happened if the the trial had not been moved from colored L.A. to all-White Seamy Valley, due ironically to massive media exposure of the case.

The Whites of Seamy Valley were far more likely to sympathize with the White cops as most of them had fled the the multiracialism of Los Angeles to settle in their neat and clean and civilized suburban city, though all would of course deny being racist. In L.A. the reverse would have been true and the mostly colored jury would have identified with the poor Black victim. Such is the nature of "justice" in the U.S.; it is now racial justice or rather racial politics that dictates verdicts. Just one more example of the failure of multiracialism and the crying need for separate racial nations on the soil of America. GG

SHORT BURSTS

Best Congress Money Can Buy

The Senate Ethics Committee (an oxymoron) slapped the hand of Senator Alan Cranston in the Keating Affair and let the other four Senators who also sold influence to Keating off the hook. Cranston, however, refused to play along. He unrepentantly charged that all the Senators sitting in judgement of him did exactly the same thing and that they should spell out which aspects of his behavior were inappropriate. The Senate is, of course, loath to set such a standard because then it would become obvious to all that Cranston is quite right about his being no more corrupt than the rest. Keating admitted that he was in the business of buying political influence to increase his wealth and power. So is every other lobbyist and supporter of Congress, and the people are beginning to see through the sham of "legal" contributions by rich benefactors. It is through such large contributions that the real rulers rule. The politicians are just fronts for the real game - which is almost always played behind the scenes.

Shrinking of the Middle Class

The University of Michigan's Panel Study of Income Dynamics which has studied income distribution in America since 1968 has announced astonishing findings in regard to the 1980's. In 1976 75% of all Americans could claim to be in the middle class but by 1990 only 60% could so claim. Professor Timothy Smeeding says that the middle class has shrunk by more than 20% and is still falling. The study has tracked 5000 extended families (40,000 people) since 1968. The study found that change for the worse began to accelerate rapidly in the mid-1980's.

Home Schooling Rises

According to the U.S. Department of Education there has been an enormous rise in home schooling over the last decade. In 1980 15,000 children were schooled at home whereas in 1992 over 350,000 are home taught. This no doubt reflects an increasing disaffection with the quality, safety and moral indoctrination (or lack thereof) of the public and private school systems. Home schoolers tend to be better educated than than their peers. They average 80 points on standardized tests as compared to 50 points (on a 100 point scale) for school children. This is probably due to the the individual attention, individual recognition and individual pace that the home schooled child receives from his parent-teacher. This reinforces the argument of the NDF that the bulk of a child's education should take place in the home under the guidance of a parent and that he should spend no more than four hours a day in school.

Class Struggle and the Decline of Nations

Editor - This is Part III, the final section of our article dealing with the problem of class:

The Cart Before the Horse

Many racialists believe that the decline of nations is caused by the mixing of races, but the truth is that a healthy social order does not bring or invite other races onto its soil. Only nations already riven by class conflict begin the process of racial self-destruction. The first step is usually the importation of slaves or wage-slaves by an elite that does not wish to pay its own workers a living wage and who prefer to be surrounded by subservience rather than suffer a more equal social interaction with those of its own kind. The elite uses alien races to further dominate and control what it sees as its most dangerous enemies - the lower classes of its own nation. Race-mixing and miscegenation occur only in an already sick society; they accelerate decline but are not its first cause.

So we must look to ourselves in attempting to resolve our problems, and once we have made ourselves healthy again the racial problem will fall away. A people secure and united in its own identity will want nothing to do with alien races, rather such a people seeks only to be itself. Those peoples living in racially mixed societies can only live neurotically as they can never be themselves. We cannot live according to our own nature except in a racially pure country. This is both obvious to and heartfelt by every psychologically balanced people.

Root Causes

Class identification and conflict arise from man's fundamental emotional needs and hence must be fought anew in each generation regardless of what came before. The psychology of the elite is different from that of the masses. The lower classes can and generally must satisfy their need for identity vicariously. Specifically, when given the opportunity to do so they will identify with the nation and live through it, feeling its victories and defeats as their own and seeing their lives as inextricably intertwined with that of the nation. When the nation dominates they feel dominant and great, when it is dominated they feel emasculated and enslaved. This is a phenomenon of mass psychology and it does not apply to the ruling class.

The psychology of the ruling class is far more individual in character. The law of the crowd has much less impact upon members of the elite as they know personally the men, and the kind of men, who run the nation. They need not and normally do not seek to fulfill their emotional needs for identity, stimulation and security vicariously, rather they are active players in an individualistic game that establishes the pecking order both amongst themselves and amongst the classes. Revolutionary idealism that is opposed to class consciousness will find itself continuously losing ground to this force which operates amongst elites unless it is aided by a system of institutions designed to counter the manifestations of class identification.

Leadership Alone Must Fail

Good leadership is not the key. All sorts of second-rate minds, including Talleyrand, Fouché, Bernadotte and Murat, thought they could run France better than Napoleon. These men saw Napoleon as a man and in recognizing his human faults judged him by their own lights. (Interestingly, the truly first-rate minds such as Desaix and Davout were not so self-deceived or so envious and they served loyally.) Hitler had similar fidelity problems with men such as Roehm, Himmler and Goering. Genghis Khan was forced to kill his Shaman for the same reason. Political genius alone cannot bring an end to Machiavellian maneuver within the elite nor to the desire of the elite to live better than and dominate the people, even though such genius generates extraordinary loyalty on the part of the masses.

It is for this reason that we must develop both doctrine and structure to fight the inevitable development of class consciousness within the ruling class, which left to itself always poisons social relations, inspires class warfare and causes the eventual downfall of the nation. The first step is to recognize that the social game must be continually reset by the government as no system of wealth sharing or power sharing is permanent without constant adjustment. This we have demonstrated in our analysis of class in ancient Greece and Rome showing how even the Spartan system gradually became undone through the concentration of wealth and power. We must have a system that is regularly rebalanced as only sharing and participation can achieve long term unity.

Endless Struggle

The practical difficulties in fulfilling this principle are truly staggering as the bulk of the wealthy will always "connive, manipulate and corrupt" until they once again control. Indeed those driven to make a lot of money are usually the most materialistic, self-interested and least virtuous of citizens. And they normally make their fortunes through some form of chicanery. Capitalist media is loath to admit this truth but it always comes out in the biographies of the dead robber barons who once ruled the plutocracy. So how can we contain such people?

The Capitalists tell us that if everyone would just freely follow their own self-interest that all social problems resolve themselves in the free play of material forces (the notorious "Invisible Hand") such that the maximum of efficiency and happiness is achieved for the society. Unfortunately, capitalist history does not agree with capitalist theory - the reality being that the freedom of the rich is bought and paid for by the exploitation and powerlessness of the ordinary citizen. The Communist solution to this problem of social justice was "from each according to his ability, to each according to his need." But as with capitalist freedom, communist social justice came with a heavy price tag. In practice enforcing equality entailed a huge and oppressive state bureaucracy which stifled individual initiative at all levels and which engendered first vast passive resistance and finally open rebellion.

Nationalist Synthesis

The National Socialists sought to synthesize the contradictory forces of capitalism and socialism by establishing a system in which all lived well with considerable personal freedom of action and equal basic opportunities for advancement in government (though not in business), thus there would be no cause for envy of the rich and class consciousness would disappear; under National Socialism as long as the entire citizenry worked and prospered it did not matter how rich the wealthy became - and indeed the industrialists and some Party officials became obscenely affluent during the Second World War while the lower classes made enormous sacrifices.

As we have seen wealth was already corrupting leading officials of National Socialist Germany and it would not have taken long before the rich had connived, manipulated and corrupted themselves back into political power. In fact, they were poised to so upon Hitler's death as the degenerate Goering was the Fuehrer's announced successor. The National Socialists had the right idea in attempting a synthesis (as opposed to a compromise) between capitalism and communism, they simply came up with an imperfect synthesis.

Considering the complexity of the problem this is hardly surprising. Napoleon devised three distinct structures to synthesize democracy with aristocracy (the term Consulship, the permanent Consulship, and the meritocratic Empire) and unfortunately he threw away the best shot at achieving a workable long term approach when he abandoned the term Consulship. But at least Napoleon and Hitler, two of the greatest minds in the history of our race, have pointed us in the right direction. Now it is up to us to perfect the synthesis into a practicable, permanent system of nationalist government.

The Divided Elite

Under Democratic Nationalism the political elite will be separated from the business elite and the latter will be effectively frozen out of government. Moreover the rich will not be so wealthy and powerful as they are now because their income, net assets and number of employees will be limited by the constitution. For example they will not be allowed to own more than one hundred times the median individual holding. The annual graduated income tax will cap out at ten times the median individual income. And no man will be able to employ more than one hundred workers. With the NDF system there will probably be more millionaires than there are at present but there will be no multimillionaires and billionaires.

The political, economic and military academies which will provide the officers of the national government will be drawn at a young age from the lower classes. The children of the wealthy will not apply because the wealth and income of these officers will be fixed such that they live in middle class comfort throughout their lives but no more. They will sign lifetime binding contracts to this effect upon entering the academies. Their income will be tied to the national median income and will rise or fall accordingly. This National Officer Corps will see itself as a special order of service and sacrifice which will loyally serve the Nationleader, he being the ultimate representative and foremost leader of the people. The sacred oath of the National Officer will be to the people and constitution such that the national interest reigns supreme.

The bureaucracy being so organized, the wealthy will attempt to establish their hegemony through the political parties. But they will find this a difficult road as all sorts of obstacles will be erected to prevent money from dominating the political process (see the NDF's Program of Democratic Nationalism for more detail.) This will be a continual battle but the rich must be cut off at every turn. The constitution will call upon the Nation-leader to prevent the electoral process from being unduly influenced by money, and he will act to counter each new device invented by the business elite and wealthy special interests to undermine this provision of the constitution.

Participation over Paternalism

The political parties will be more ideological in nature than the plutocratic parties of the present day because of the nationwide proportional representation system and because of limits upon contributions and spending, thus mass membership and participation will be encouraged in the political parties and the energies of the members, rather than finances, will be decisive in electoral success.

Not only will there be greater political participation, but there will be greater participation in the workplace and greater freedom of action in daily economic affairs and social life because all firms over one hundred employees will be converted to worker cooperatives as outlined by our Program. And large firms will be broken down into more manageable and more human smaller companies. Workers of the hand and of the mind will have far greater control over their fate than is possible under the present capitalist system.

Constant economic readjustment that prevents the over-concentration of wealth will take place through the progressive income tax, the cap on wealth, the full-employment program with a living minimum wage, and the confiscation of decedents' estates over a reasonable amount, all as described in the NDF Program.

White Nationalist Synergy

The entire NDF system must be installed if this most obstinate problem of class conflict is to be finally solved. The synergy of these various political, economic and social programs will ensure the long term unity of our people. Only in this way can we break the death cycle of history that has destroyed one White nation after another - and pave the way for a great new unity of the entire White people. GG
