"Aryan, White humanity is on the precipice of darkness and oblivion. Strewn on the crags in the eternal darkness below are the bones of other know-it-all, pompous civilizations which were doubtless unable to imagine their own demise at the very time when they were surrounded by the outward power and magnificence of empire....

"The only thing to which I can be loyal with any deep conviction — the only loyalty which makes any sense — is my racial, and therefore cultural, brotherhood with my own people, no matter where they happened to have been born!...

"I am a WHITE MAN;
a brother to all other White men, and I mean to stand with all of them and, if necessary, lead them in the battle to survive against the unspeakable menace of the colored millions of the earth rising to slaughter and rapine against the White man — and led by the scheming Jew!...

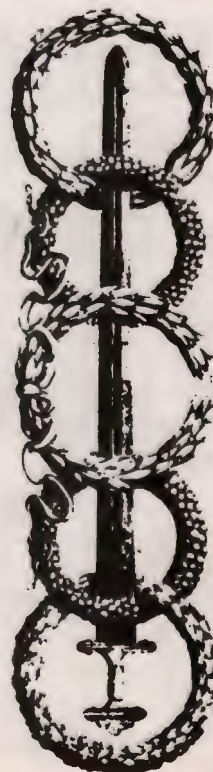

"The battle of our times, if there is to be any battle — is for the SURVIVAL OF THE WHITE RACE!...

"The kind of unprecedentedly colossal movement which can alone reverse the suicidal trend of the Western world, and usher in even another thousand years of survival for the White man can never be launched — let alone won — in any "safe," painless or easy way. Even ordinary sufferings and martyrdom are too miniscule for the kind of movement we must set aflame to survive. Everything about the current deadly battle for world mastery is and must be Olympian, and we cannot shrink from Olympian agonies if we are to hope to win."

Stormtroopers to Confront System at GOP Convention

ARLINGTON (July 13) — Commander Koehl returned from Miami Beach today after laying plans for the "Operation Beachhead," the Nazi's major summer action project. Koehl will lead a tough contingent of Stormtroopers on the shores of the all-Jewish Florida city that has become virtually a living enclave on American soil. The troopers were ordered by the Commander to the Miami Beach mayor and city council during the year, but dispatched to the city without acceptance and rejection. The war will be there, in the Commander's words, "To confront and expose the anti-White System and its lackeys," during the climactic face of the Republican Convention. A further purpose, he said, will be to help safeguard any White people endangered by threatened Communist riots at the Convention. Leaders of a number of pro-Aryan organizations were invited to join in the White Power demonstration, and several groups expressed interest. Operation Beachhead was scheduled for August 19-23. A full report will be published in next month's WHITE POWER.

American Nazis Plan Happening

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The American Nazi party Tuesday would hold a "white people's happening" during the Republican National Convention to protest racial integration. Koehl of Arlington, Va., commander of the group, said the event will begin Saturday—two days before the convention—and run through the GOP meeting's close Aug. 23. Koehl said the happening would call attention to the "two-party system" of white people's interests. We are going to demand that racism and all form of racial integration be ended immediately.

OPERATION BEACHHEAD REACHES MILLIONS — Stormtroopers Battle Commies — Commander Arrested

On Thursday morning, 17 August, a busload of Stormtroopers left Party Headquarters in Arlington. The next evening they arrived, weary after a 1200-mile trip, at the Jew capital of the South — Miami Beach. At their secret operational headquarters, they linked up with a hardened group of local comrades and with Commander Matt Koehl, who had arrived earlier in the week. Operation Beachhead was about to begin — the Communist crud, the Jew populace, and the anti-White System-prostitutes at the Republican Convention, alike, were about to meet with and learn about the determination and courage of National Socialists.

Before the arrival of the Stormtroopers, Commander Koehl had been garnering publicity with radio and press interviews. The local citizenry had been informed that a White People's Happening would occur in Miami Beach during the Republican Convention. The telephone lines of local radio station WKAT rang with Jewish epithets about the Commander's interview that was aired the morning of the 18th.

On the 19th, Commander Koehl and a contingent of Stormtroopers toured Fort Lauderdale and Broward County just north of Miami with the White Power bus. Residents were treated to the sight of the "White Power" signs complete with Swastikas.

Then came the 20th, a quiet Sunday for most people, but destined to be a day that the Communist creeps in Flamingo Park will not soon forget. That afternoon, 20 Stormtroopers led by Commander Koehl entered this Marxist stronghold, long abandoned by local police, and challenged 2,000 Reds in the only way you can challenge them — by force!

The accompanying newspaper clippings hardly describe the events of that day. This is what happened:

Dressed in civilian attire, the National Socialists walked casually into the park. Almost immediately they were recognized — first someone remarked sardonically, "Looks like the rednecks are here." Then — "It's the Nazis! Get Security, get Security!" Near-panic swept over the creeps. Reporters sighted us and asked who we were. One of our men answered, "You'll find out in a minute."

The path we took through the center of the camp had been renamed the Ho Chi Minh Trail. It led to a large tent with signs on the outside purporting that inside was proof of atrocities committed by Americans on the peace-loving people of North Vietnam. Nearby was the large speaker's platform which dominated the most prominent area of the Commie campsite.

Suddenly Commander Koehl motioned and the troopers stormed the platform pushing its hairy occupants off onto the ground. Within seconds the National Socialists had taken over the stand. A group of creeps attacked one wing and was beaten off immediately. For nearly two hours, while the Marxists raged impotently, the Stormtroopers held the stage. Beer cans, boards, pieces of watermelon rind whizzed by occasionally hitting a trooper.

White Power Salutes

Stirring cries of "White Power" sent the Red creeps into a rage. The crowd now ominously surrounding the platform remained strangely silent as shout after shout of "White Power" reverberated across the mall. Meanwhile eight-inch long spikes were passed openly among a segment of the crowd. Several flashed knives threateningly.

Commander Koehl, addressing the leftist mob, demanded a half-hour's use of the speaker's equipment and that all un-American and pro-Red flags and banners be lowered for the rest of the day. If these demands were met, he stated, the Stormtroopers would leave immediately. The leaders of the various groups went into a lengthy, "democratic" caucus, while the Commander talked with reporters and haggled with police representatives who begged him to leave because they would not interfere if trouble started.

The camp leaders finally reached a decision. Their Red flags would stay up. They would take back their platform by force. No free speech for Nazis. Nonviolence was for the Establishment, not for them.

The fight lasted for five to ten minutes. Twice the Marxists attacked the Aryan-held platform, twice they were repulsed. As the creeps rallied for a third and final assault, only six National Socialists still stood stolidly before the frenzied mob. The rest, dragged into the crowd, had succeeded in fighting their way out into the street when they couldn't get back on the platform, or were beaten and carried out, a Commie on each arm and leg. Commander Koehl, scratched and bleeding, led the group still holding the stage. One trooper, downed by several leftists, had been kicked in the face. Blood was flowing freely and he looked seriously injured. The Commander decided to give up the platform. "We were overwhelmed," he later told reporters. "Our man was too badly hurt to risk him being killed." But the last six left on their own feet, pushing and fighting their way through to the street. One National Socialist was hospitalized briefly for facial injuries, but a far greater toll had been exacted from the enemy. The police reported next day that four "Flamingo Park residents" had been hospitalized or treated for serious injuries, including a broken arm and a broken thumb.

Fontainebleau Picket — "Flush Integration"

But the day wasn't over. At 9:00 that evening, 18 Stormtroopers in full uniform appeared in front of the Fontainebleau Hotel, scene of a gala ball for the Republican delegates. Wearing a special ST armband instead of the regular Aryan Cross to avoid prosecution under Miami Beach's anti-Swastika law, the Stormtroopers unfurled a 32-foot long banner which proclaimed in no uncertain terms "FLUSH INTEGRATION." Within minutes traffic was almost at a standstill before the huge sign. Old, shriveled-up Jews, "fortunate survivors of Auschwitz," appeared as if by magic.

Miami Beach jails Nazi for displaying swastika

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Miami Beach Mayor Chuck Hall ordered the arrest and jailing Wednesday of American Nazi party leader Matt Koehl for displaying a swastika, police said.

Koehl had asked for an appointment with Hall to protest against treatment of Nazi party members by Republican convention protesters at Flamingo Park. Koehl arrived wearing a swastika armband. Hall said he would give Koehl an opportunity to remove it since it is against a Miami Beach ordinance to display the swastika, police said. When Koehl refused, Hall ordered him arrested and taken to jail.

Antiwar vets, Nazis clash

By JERRY RANKIN
Century News Service

MIAMI BEACH — When the Nazis clashed with the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, there wasn't a uniformed policeman in sight.

The police in this Republican Convention city left it entirely up to the combatants when the first violent incident of the week arose on a muggy Sunday afternoon.

Violence won — and lost. Mostly.

The Nazi invasion of "the land" — the name by which the radicals identify their 35-acre Flamingo Park stronghold — came abruptly. It caught the tail end of the "watermelon-in" by senior citizens — which in this city of 67,000 means a retired New Yorker — and young people (that means bearded or braless young persons from far away).

And it caught a caravan of Vietnam Veterans Against the War driving and marching in after a long hike down A1A, the Florida version of California's Interstate 5.

A few minutes before 3 p.m., a near-hysterical young man ran through the campground shouting that "The Nazis are here." They were.

About 20 young or middle-aged men, several of Cuban extraction, pushed in and took over the much-valued sound stage from the singers occupying it.

The banter began: "This is a white man's country" "Free Cuba" "Arayans arise"

The crowd of 1,000 to 2,000 pressed toward the stage. A score or so of elderly citizens of this predominantly Jewish city — that means 9 out of 10 persons you meet are Jews — began to shout at the invaders.

Two or three of the women took up sticks, but were restrained by the young people. More than one senior citizen was heard by a reporter to shout "They should have gone to the ovens."

As the Nazi salute thrust out, the mood of the crowd tightened. The leaders of the various groups here, more than 30 by actual count, debated tactics. The Nazis — who identified themselves as members of the National Socialist White People's Party shouted.

Scores of the "land" occupants turned their backs on the Nazis and debated what to do.

Others threw watermelon rinds, cans of soda pop and a few rocks and boards at the interlopers. Two or three threw them back, and serious injuries were averted by inches, both sides possessing poor aim.

The Vietnam Vets, commonly known as VVAW, formed a hasty ring around the stage and kept a number of frenzied persons from attacking the Nazis.

How the affair was handled illustrates the low, low-keyed approach of Miami Beach's fat, colorful, thoughtful, clever police chief, Rocky Pomerance.

Informal attempts at negotiations were undertaken by American Civil Liberties Union observers, religious observers, "ombudsmen" and a pink-shirted member of the local police community relations squad.

One of his several chest adornments, read "practice nonviolence."

As the debate lengthened into an hour, Nazis standing stolidly on the stage and increasingly restless radicals demanding action, National Guard and local police helicopters dipped over, hovered and moved away.

The Nazi leader said he'd leave if he got half an hour to address the crowd — "We want someone up here who will be Pro-America" or if the police ordered him to move on.

A vote of the crowd refused the time he wanted — he already had captured a substantial amount, anyway — and the policeman wouldn't tell him what to do. Instead, the policeman told the VVAW leaders "This is your affair, your land, you provide the security."

Eventually parts of the crowd formed a line of linked arms at a nearby entrance, the scores of veterans moved to the stage and began pulling the Nazis off.

The fight started.

It lasted about four to five minutes, was quite violent at times and ended with half the Nazis pulled, pushed and carried out of the park. One man was severely beaten as the Nazis fought to retain the stage, and received medical care from the veterans' corps of medical corpsmen.

The remaining Nazis agreed to a peaceful escort out of the park, and left surrounded by veterans and accompanied by shouts of what they could do with Hitler.

One of the Vietnam veterans, who project the most cohesive front at this campground of the alienated, remarked "the story isn't the violence with the Nazis. It's how we handled the situation. They got their say and we got rid of them."

American Nazis Trigger Confrontation at Campsite

By DENNIS BEAL

National Washington Correspondent

MIAMI BEACH — Peaceful Flamingo Park erupted into a bloody brawl Sunday afternoon when 20 American Nazi party storm troopers attempted to take over the park.

Matt Koehl marched his Nazi storm troopers into the park, mounted the speakers stage and defied the hundreds of circling demonstrators to remove him.

"ALL WE'RE interested in," Koehl, of Arlington, Va., explained, "is for these anti-American flags and Viet Cong banners to be removed."

The demonstrators, however, refused to honor his demands, refused to let him use the public address system and, after Koehl refused to leave, grabbed the Nazis one by one.

Koehl and his men were dragged from the stage by members of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, a mostly bearded, dirty group of men dressed in Army fatigues.

MANY OF THE veterans had armed themselves with metal stakes before they went after Koehl, commander of the National Socialist White People's party.

One of the Nazis, Dennis Rucker of Arlington, was smashed in the head by the demonstrators. Rucker was taken to a hospital after the incident.

Koehl left with Rucker, saying "We were overwhelmed. We had no choice. Our man was too badly hurt to risk his being killed."

KOEHLE WAS physically tossed into the street, his rag tag band of Nazis fleeing up another street away from the jeering demonstrators.

Koehl's confrontation with the demonstrators was over when the Rev. Carl McIntire, fundamentalist preacher of New Jersey, came to People's Park trying to find "some hippie to share a talk show with me tomorrow afternoon. A station will give us three hours if I can find someone willing to talk with me" on the call in, question and answer radio program.

McIntire did not appear to have success in locating someone willing to share his stage.

Many Aryans cheered or gave the thumbs up sign as they drove by. There was no trouble as the Republican delegates entering the hotel looked stonily at the National Socialist delegation for White America and their message to Nixon.

The next day, Monday, the White Power bus roamed through Hialeah, Miami Springs, South Miami, West Miami, and other White suburbs of Dade County. A Jewish reporter followed us, recording on camera our operations as we distributed WHITE POWER newspapers and talked to local residents. By now we had become quite famous. More and more people were reacting favorably to the the White Power signs on the side of the bus. Young people approached us eagerly for literature.

In a brief incident at a Lum's restaurant in North Miami, A/GL Richard Saunders had the distinct pleasure of chasing a particularly swinish young Jew around and landing four or five good blows on his beak before police arrived. Unfortunately the first two "officers" on the scene were hebes who attended the same sheenygogue as the young kike. Fortunately White officers soon arrived and bystanders spoke up testifying that the Jew started the incident by attacking Saunders first. The Jew cops told the troopers not to come back to North Miami again. The next morning, the local paper reported that the young man of the Jewish faith bloodied four Nazis before the police arrived to save them. The source for this amusing bit of fiction was officer Anthony Ashberger, North Miami police.

Key Biscayne Picket — "White Power"

Early the next morning, Commander Koehl was interviewed on Swiss radio. That afternoon, he was once again at the head of his troops — this time their destination was Key Biscayne, Tricky Dick's Southern White House. At the heavily guarded gate, the Commander asked to see the President. When his request was refused, he presented a letter to the President's representative and ordered the Stormtroopers to unfurl a giant 28-foot banner reading in bold letters "WHITE POWER." After several hours of picketing which attracted many interested on-lookers and a covey of reporters the Stormtroopers departed. The evening was spent touring in the bus, advertising for the Cause and generally letting the White populace know we were for real.

Commander Koehl Arrested for Wearing Swastika — Trial by Jewry

The next day, Wednesday, the 23rd, Commander Koehl had selected to test the constitutionality of an anti-Swastika ordinance in Miami Beach. Although the ordinance also banned display of the Hammer and Sickle, the Communist flag was flown openly with no action taken by the police or demanded by the 90 per cent Jewish local community.

The double standard had to be exposed. Knowing that he would be arrested, Commander Koehl alone wore the symbol of Aryan Man as the Stormtroopers unloaded from the cars of local supporters in front of the Mayor's office which was also just across from the Republican Convention Site. The mayor, Chuck Hall, police, and reporters and cameramen were waiting.

As the Stormtroopers stood at attention nearby, the Commander politely refused a police order to remove the Swastika armband he wore. He was placed under arrest, and as he awaited the arrival of a police vehicle, he gave interviews to reporters.

When the police car arrived, the Commander was escorted inside, a burly cop on each arm. As the car pulled away with their leader, the Stormtroopers, to the man, raised their right arm in the Aryan salute and shouted "White Power."

Commander Koehl was released later that day on $500 bond although the charge was only a misdemeanor. The previous day, Marxist David Dellinger of Chicago Seven fame had been released on his own recognizance as were over one thousand of the Marxists arrested during the convention. At his court trial the next day, the Commander, represented by the ACLU who were interested in the constitutionality of the case, was found guilty, fined $500 and sentenced to 90 days in jail. This is one of the stiffest sentences ever passed down on such a case. The judge in this "trial by Jewry" was Judge Nelan Sweet. The case has been appealed and the Commander is free on $1000 bond.

"Operation Beachhead has been a great success," the Commander stated at the final debriefing as the assembled Stormtroopers and local supporters waited to leave to be reunited with their families and return to their jobs. "We've demonstrated to millions of our White American brothers that we can battle these Communists in the street, on the one hand, and protest against the anti-White System, on the other, and get away with it.

"In the future, we will look back at Operation Beachhead as one of the most important events on our path to Aryan victory and a new world order."

Commander Koehl Speaks Over Vancouver Radio

On 15 August, Commander Koehl was interviewed by radio CKWX, Vancouver, B.C. The fifteen minute interview was followed by 1 1/2 hours of listener response in the form of question and answers.

The Commander was interviewed by phone, but present in the studio was a Party representative, James Peters, an Indian from the Human Rights Commission and a Negro candidate running in a local constituency. The Commander pinpointed and answered many of the fallacies concerning the Movement, as well as discussing future party goals in conjunction with White Power.

As a result of the program many interested inquirers wrote in to the Party's local address: Box 36, Burnaby 1, B.C., Canada

JDL Pushes for "Reform" in Philadelphia — Party Activists Harassed

Despite a Jew congressman with a liberal tongue and a sensitive ear for WPM recordings or JDL harassment of local activists, the message of the National Socialist Movement will reach the people. In Philadelphia, a vile but energetic Congressman by the name of Josh Eilberg is trying to get the city fathers to put the clamps on Charles Kress and his White Power Message. Eilberg is determined that not even the First Amendment will stand in his way. See the accompanying news clippings.

Not to be outdone the JDL has attempted to harass local Party activist, Nicholas DiNunzio, on his job. So far only JDLers have been evicted from the job site.

The JDL attempt to file a $10 million suit against the NSWPP isn't finished. They're still trying to browbeat the ACLU into handling their case and into stopping their recent assistance to Comrade Kress.

JDL Wants Action Against Nazis; Nat'l Council Minimizes 'Hatred'

While the 300 delegates to the National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council plenary session in Los Angeles last week were denying any sizeable amount of anti-Semitic activity in the U.S., a local Jewish activist group was meeting with American Civil Liberties Union officials here in an effort to get ACLU to file a $10 million suit against a national neo-Nazi group.

The Jewish Defense League here met with the ACLU leaders at the latter's offices on 15th st. and offered "evidence" in the form of organs and flyers of the National Socialist White People's Party which castigated both Jews and Negroes alike. Russell Kahner, JDL regional coordinator, said in addition to the "Big Lie" technique utilized by the Nazi party information officials, the NSWPP accused American Jews of having major responsibility in the traffic of illicit drugs.

Kahner also reported that a new NSWPP taped telephone message is currently in operation, "seminarizing" its violent hatred against minorities and he characterized the entire neo-Nazi program as being viciously libelous against the Jews and the Negroes.

Declined Offer
The ACLU, through Spencer Coxe, its executive director, declined the offer of entering a libel suit against NSWPP on the basis that the organization does not represent anyone in a libel suit. The ACLU serves only to protect citizens from restrictions by governmental agencies in the right of free speech and other liberties, Coxe said.

The organization also upheld the right of free speech by members of the neo-Nazi group and its privilege to broadcast telephone taped messages. Coxe said he sympathized with the views of the JDL regarding anti-Semitism, but he also upheld the right of the neo-Nazis to disseminate their views through the regular processes of free speech.

In the event of the ACLU's continuing to defend the NSWPP in its "propaganda campaign" against Jews and other minorities, Kahner said, the JDL will hold demonstrations against the ACLU "to discourage them from assisting the Nazis."

No Anti-Jewishness
The National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council, representing nine national Jewish organizations and 93 local community relations agencies, denounced as "irresponsible and reprehensible" any alarmist view of a threat of serious anti-Jewish outbreaks. Local representatives to the NJCRC included Albert Chernin, executive director of the NJCRC here; Benjamin Loewenstein, president of the Philadelphia NJCRC; Theodore Mann, vice chairman of the NJCRC; and Nathan Agran, associate director of NJCRC.

A policy statement, adopted by the delegates attending the annual plenary at the Century Plaza Hotel, asserted that "in no place and at no time in modern history have Jews as a group been more secure than in the United States in the present generation."

The council's declaration did not name the Jewish Defense League but was clearly directed at repudiating recent warnings by Rabbi Meier Kahane, the JDL leader, that the security of American Jews was in peril.

The Jewish organization leaders said such warnings were "without foundation."

Extremists Blamed
"Notwithstanding the severe stresses to which the nation has been subject in recent years and with which increased overt anti-Semitic manifestations are classically associated, such manifestations have been confined largely to some militant Negro elements and to extremists of the left and the right," the statement declared.

"None of these groups commands substantial public support or acceptance," it added. The council, in its assessment, found that anti-Semitism "fomented by black nationalists and other extremist black groups" was not representative of the black community and that the actions of such groups "have come to be widely regarded as lunatic."

In an address, Albert E. Arent of Washington, D.C., chairman of the council, reaffirmed the sentiment expressed by the council's declaration.

"We have built here, in the free democratic atmosphere of our land, a vital Jewish life. We are confident of the continuing viability of that life," Arent said.

Eilberg Attempts to Curb Kress Telephone Messages Meet with Little Success

Congressman Joshua Eilberg does not feel too optimistic about his chances of limiting the recorded telephone messages of Charles Kress, leader of the National Socialist White People's Party. The problem is dual, according to a spokesman for Eilberg, in the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech. Kress, says the spokesman, cannot be prevented from recording his messages of "hate and bigotry" until some aspect of them can be defined as illegal, such as an advocacy of specific action against some individual or group or such activity which can be classified as illegal.

The Human Relations Commission, having conducted a hearing on June 2 on Kress' activities, discerned that a part of the recording was meant "to maliciously motivate the behavior of young people, particularly children of elementary school age." Eilberg's spokesman indicated that Kress was suggesting that children stay home from school. That provides a possible angle of attack for Eilberg.

Eilberg, in his attempt to enlist aid in restricting Kress' use of recorded messages wrote Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania and the Federal Communications Commission. Officers of both organizations refused help although for different reasons.

Cashel Replies
William Cashel Jr., president of Bell Telephone, responded to Eilberg's letter of inquiry along the lines of a traditional guarantee, claiming that as long as Kress pays for the telephone service and complies with regulations he is allowed to transmit whatever he chooses until some ruling indicates otherwise.

Having received from Eilberg a copy of the HRC's hearing on Kress, Cashel aligned his views with that of the Commission, that Kress' "freedom of political expression" must be protected, that concerns must center "solely (and) in the manner in which the telephone service was used by Mr. Kress and his organization."

Cashel maintained that as long as Kress is guaranteed the freedom of speech, "the matter comes down to whether or not a telephone company or even a Congress, may interfere with the transmission of the message of the type described."

There are serious difficulties in attempting to do so, and these are based upon constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech.

Kress, Cashel noted, has complied with Bell Telephone in paying for the service and including in his message the name of his organization and its address, a company requirement. Cashel said he was "concerned" about "this vexing problem."
